The Camelot in Irish on Thursday and Friday last. The ents were to be held in the neighborhood of Derby, and at Oswestry, in Ludgerton.

4. The entertainment at St. John's College, Cambridge, was attended by a large number of students and visitors. The students were divided into two parties, the one under the leadership of the Provost, and the other under the leadership of the Master. The entertainment consisted of a procession through the streets of the city, followed by a banquet in the college gardens. The entertainment was well attended, and was considered to be a great success.

5. The entertainment at the University of London was attended by a large number of students and visitors. The students were divided into two parties, the one under the leadership of the Master, and the other under the leadership of the Provost. The entertainment consisted of a procession through the streets of the city, followed by a banquet in the college gardens. The entertainment was well attended, and was considered to be a great success.

6. The entertainment at the University of Oxford was attended by a large number of students and visitors. The students were divided into two parties, the one under the leadership of the Master, and the other under the leadership of the Provost. The entertainment consisted of a procession through the streets of the city, followed by a banquet in the college gardens. The entertainment was well attended, and was considered to be a great success.

7. The entertainment at the University of Cambridge was attended by a large number of students and visitors. The students were divided into two parties, the one under the leadership of the Master, and the other under the leadership of the Provost. The entertainment consisted of a procession through the streets of the city, followed by a banquet in the college gardens. The entertainment was well attended, and was considered to be a great success.

8. The entertainment at the University of Edinburgh was attended by a large number of students and visitors. The students were divided into two parties, the one under the leadership of the Master, and the other under the leadership of the Provost. The entertainment consisted of a procession through the streets of the city, followed by a banquet in the college gardens. The entertainment was well attended, and was considered to be a great success.