Program in Early American Economy and Society

The Library Company of Philadelphia's Program in Early American Economy and Society fosters scholarship in, and public understanding of, the origins and growth of the early American economy, broadly conceived, from its origins in the colonial era and through the antebellum period.

The Program supports scholarship research in many fields that fall under this general rubric, including commerce, manufacturing, labor, technology, transportation, finance, agriculture, the environment, and social development. Now in its second year, the Program has initiated a number of activities that draw researchers together and connect scholars across these fields throughout the country and abroad.

PEAES sponsors a fellowship program, a monograph publication series, an annual prize for the best journal article(s) relating to the early American economy, seminars, acquisitions of printed materials which augment the Library Company of Philadelphia's already rich collections, a survey of manuscript and printed resources in economic history throughout the wider Philadelphia region, a collection of current research on the early national economy, and more.

Each year PEAES also sponsors a conference on a theme of importance to scholars of colonial and early republic America. For program information and advance copies of conference papers, please visit the website at www.librarycompany.org, and follow the links to the Economy Program, or contact Cathy Matson, Director, at cmatson@udel.edu.
